Undergraduate Minor in Educational Studies

The minor in educational studies is administered by the Department of International and Comparative Education in the Graduate School of Education. This minor offers undergraduate students at AUC an opportunity to study educational issues related to educational reform, as well as theories and practices of teaching and learning. It is an initial base from which they may pursue postgraduate interests in education, and it provides humanities, social sciences or natural sciences majors with an introduction to the professional opportunities available in education.

This minor requires 15 credit hours from among the following courses. The Education and Society and Fundamentals of Teaching and Learning courses are core courses and prerequisites required of all students.

EDUC 2011 Education and Society (3 cr.) (Core course, prerequisite)
